Medical spas: An alternative to the doctor's office

Clinical skin care procedures with less hassle

Medical spas are the biggest thing happening in the $6 billion booming spa industry, and North Fulton is lucky to have one of the best — Ageless Remedies in Roswell.

A national franchise medical spa — originating in Bushnell, but now across the U.S. — Ageless Remedies offers both women and men a beautiful environment to receive clinical skin care services, some available up to now only through a dermatologist.

"Technology has improved so much. You used to have to wait a long time to get an appointment with a dermatologist or a plastic facial surgeon, but that's now history for most of us," said Linda DiPrimo, who owns the spa with Laura Surret.

What differentiates a medical spa from just a regular spa is its staff's ability to safely and effectively offer a greater scope of services. To make that happen you have to have the direct involvement of people in the medical profession.

At Ageless Remedies the service providers are medically trained phys-sician assistants and nurse practitioners.

isn't supervised by Alpharetta-based facial plastic surgeon Dr. Mark Beatty. "We've chosen to do all of our services with mid-level practitioners. There's a higher level of training required, and they're able to offer services only available prior to this in a physician's office," said Beatty.

Though it is not its only focus, Ageless Remedies does offer many advanced anti-aging procedures.

"We baby boomers are all getting older, but we still want to look younger to do that. So, these are non-invasive high-tech procedures that we can do to compete with young women just coming out of college," said DiPrimo.
